Under PUBLIC LAW 81-874, TITLE VIII IMPACT AID LAW, federal aid is provided to public school districts on the basis of the number of students whose parents live and /or work on federal tax-exempt property. Each year a survey of public school pupils and parents is conducted throughout the school system to determine the number of eligible students. Federal grant money received is used to help provide better learning environments for our children like additional teachers, textbooks school services and many other basic needs. A completed source check form is required by the United States Department of Education as legal certification of employment as of October 29, 2004.
